

From the East

Brethren,

Over this last week, I did my yearly ritual and planted my garden. It's not a crazy garden, nothing out of the ordinary is being put in.

I'm not a great gardener, I know this very well. I plant a lot of it a bit late, get lazy on the watering, all this things a good gardener would do. Yet, hear I am again, as I have been every year since purchasing my home, planting the same old stuff.

When I think about why I continue to do this, I find it's really for 2 reasons.

First, this is how I continue to connect with my father. When I think about someone who's garden flourishes year in and year out, it's him. Onions, tomatoes, zucchini and winter squash, GARLIC! I mean, the man has a green thumb I can only dream of. But, in my 48th year, I see this as a way of continuing to learn from a man who's been the single biggest influence in my life.

The other reason is that it ties me to my heritage. My fondest memories of my grandparents home (besides my Nona's gravy) were of running around in my grandfather's garden. A giant terraced garden with rows and rows of vegetables. He learned how to garden from his father, and my father from him.

This reflection brings me back what we do every time we meet with a Brother, and how similar these experiences are to what we're doing in our work.

We learn from each Brother we interact with. Our tenured Brothers have a lot of experience and wisdom that we can all learn from. Whether it be about how to act in Lodge, how to engage someone you may have an issue with, or just help with an issue with your house, these Brothers are always willing to share.

And our work ties us to our heritage of being Masons. We're doing ritual that is very close to what was being done back when the Lodge was founded. And it's these ties that bind us as Brothers.

And I think that's a pretty cool and special thing to think about.

Fraternally Yours,
Peter N. LaFauci
Worshipful Master

From the South

"...Brotherly love, relief and truth."

These are called Masonic Ornaments. But why are they called thus? An ornament brings to mind an object hanging off of something. Akin to a bauble dangling from a holiday tree. But do these ornaments hang off of something? Well, not literally, but figuratively. An ornament means to adorn, or to be a feature of something. This particular definition comes from architecture.

Brotherly love is what we offer-not just to Brother Masons, but to those all around us. We are charged to "do good unto all."

Relieve charitably but within the length of your cable tow. Offer an ear to someone who needs it; aid a friend who needs work done to their home; volunteer at the soup kitchen.

Truth is a versatile word that can mean many things including a foundation or beacon not just being honest. Truth can be the Light we seek and the Light we give.

So be careful to maintain these ornaments, because like a glass bauble, these adornments are just as fragile and through inaction or mistreatment, they can shatter. With care, however, they strengthen the bonds we share in every aspect of our lives.
